We were building a bridge across the Gurca, or attempting to, but each time we tried it we were shelled out. The plans was downed before we first went out there, but no one dared go up to it because the Germans were lust beyond the brow of the hill, and the plans on the opposite aids, within machine gun rauge. As seen as they retreated I blaced up to the mughine and brought down the stuff I sent home, so there can be no mistake about it.
